

Facts on Global Reform

Office of the United States Trade Representative
Doha Development Agenda Policy Brief – December 2005

www.ustr.gov

American Agriculture Supports U.S. Agriculture Proposal

“The agricultural trade proposals put forth today by the United States will significantly advance that position within the WTO agriculture negotiations. We call on U.S. Trade Ambassador Portman and Agriculture Secretary Johanns to continue their strong advocacy to secure enhanced market access for U.S. farm products that would be worthy of further reform in the area of U.S. domestic supports....It must be emphasized that real trade reform must include substantial, ambitious and quantifiable expansion in access to markets. We will do our share on domestic support but developed and developing countries must do their part in reforming and expanding market access opportunities.”

Bob Stallman, President, American Farm Bureau Federation

“The AgTrade coalition today ...applauded U.S. leadership in its commitment to move the negotiations forward. The coalition called on WTO trading partners to match U.S. moves on trade-distorting domestic support with equally ambitious, harmonized tariff reductions.”

AgTrade Coalition (51 U.S. food and agriculture organizations)

“We are pleased that the U.S. is once again leading the way in the WTO on agricultural trade liberalization. We fully support the U.S. negotiating objectives and look forward to the conclusion of a comprehensive, meaningful Doha Round agreement.... For the U.S. pork industry, the key to a successful Doha Round agreement is a big market access package. The U.S. has taken a bold step today by showing real flexibility on domestic policies. It is now up to our trading partners to make an agreement possible by offering substantial market access liberalization.”

Don Buhl, President, National Pork Producers Council

“The U.S. proposal creates an environment to make great strides in opening up global agricultural trade for consumers and producers worldwide by bringing about meaningful improvements in all three pillars of the agricultural negotiations – export subsidies, trade-distorting domestic supports and market access... We urge that nations participating in the WTO negotiations use the momentum provided by this proposal to redouble efforts to make substantial progress toward an agricultural trade accord prior to the meeting of trade ministers in Hong Kong in December. By advancing a bold proposal for agriculture, the Bush administration has shown its leadership and commitment to advancing free trade, a tremendously powerful engine for economic growth.”

Kendell W. Keith, President, National Grain and Feed Association and Gary Martin, President, North American Export Grain Association

“This proposal by U.S. Trade Representative Rob Portman is a bold step forward to ending trade-distorting subsidies, here in the U.S. and in countries around the world. Such decisive action and leadership is necessary if we are to break the deadlock that currently exists in the agricultural negotiations for the World Trade Organization’s Doha Development Agenda. The Food Products Association applauds Ambassador Portman for his leadership on this issue. It is our strong hope that the European Union, Japan and other countries around the world respond positively to these proposals and engage in discussions to end existing barriers to the free international trade in agricultural products.”

Cal Dooley, President and CEO, Food Products Association

The U.S. proposal on trade-distorting domestic support will provide the much needed information to achieve 'commercially meaningful' market access. The United States has set the level of ambition for an agreement on agriculture, and it is now time for our trading partners to rise to the occasion, particularly on market access."

Thomas A. Hammer, President, National Oilseeds Processors Association

"The proposal offered by the United States could not have been clearer – nor could the level of ambition have been higher. Our negotiators have demonstrated considerable leadership in these talks. It is now time for all other WTO trading partners to follow suit with equal ambition in all three pillars of the agricultural negotiations.

Audrae Erickson, President, Corn Refiners Association

"The bold position put forward this week by U.S. trade negotiators in the World Trade Organization Doha Development Agenda negotiations, puts the U.S. back in a strong offensive position. The U.S. proposal for substantial reductions in trade-distorting domestic supports should remove any excuses countries may have had for refusing to accept major reductions in tariff and non-tariff barriers. We hope that the leadership demonstrated by the U.S. on the sensitive issue of domestic supports in agriculture will clear the path for a successful WTO Ministerial meeting in Hong Kong in December."

James H. Sumner, President, U.S.A. Poultry & Egg Export Council

"Western Growers today announced its full support for upcoming efforts by the United States Trade Representative's office to reduce or eliminate punitive tariffs on American agriculture products during the WTO trade talks scheduled for December in Hong Kong. We fully support these efforts and we look forward to the specific details needed to realize and implement a reasonable competitive environment for American agriculture in the global market."

Tom Nassif, President, Western Growers Association

"USTR's aggressive proposal is exactly what is needed to get the crucial WTO negotiations back on track. This should prompt real movement during December's Hong Kong WTO Ministerial. The Doha Round has the potential to have a deep impact on liberalizing agricultural trade, and we hope that other countries will reciprocate with meaningful market access commitments to keep the talks moving ahead."

Clay Hough, Senior Vice President and General Counsel, International Dairy Foods Association

"We commend the U.S. government for its leadership in the World Trade Organization (WTO) agriculture trade negotiations. The ambitious U.S. proposal regarding domestic supports and export subsidies is a necessary first step toward breaking the current stalemate in the talks. When implemented, these changes will increase the export potential for the food industry, which is a significant component of the U.S. agricultural sector. The successful conclusion of the WTO Doha Round of negotiations requires that we dismantle the existing barriers to trade in agriculture, especially in the area of market access. Going forward, we hope other governments will respond with equally ambitious proposals."

Sarah Thorn, Senior Director, Grocery Manufacturers Association

The U.S. wheat industry has been a strong supporter of the administration's ambitious agenda to expand world market access. For the wheat industry to stand behind such a proposal there must be true harmonization in the trade distorting practices used by other members, real, measurable parallel benefits must be achieved in market access and trade disciplines to remove the monopolistic practices of export state trading enterprises along with measures that protect U.S. food donations to those in need.

Wheat Export Trade Education Committee,
National Association of Wheat Growers,
U.S. Wheat Associates

“It is an aggressive proposal that encompasses many of the Northwest Horticultural Council’s goals and objectives for the next round of WTO negotiations. We hope that this proposal will encourage other trading partners to join the U.S. and support an ambitious undertaking in Hong Kong.”

Mark Powers, Vice President, Northwest Horticultural Council

“It demonstrates the Bush administration’s commitment to get the Doha round of trade talks on a fast track for completion. We enthusiastically support the tariff cutting formula suggested by the United States earlier today. If adopted, this would cut the highest tariffs imposed by our trading partners by 90% and could be of enormous benefit to California agriculture. The U.S. proposal also proposes to eliminate all export subsidies by 2010, something that we in California agriculture strongly support. It should also bring broad support from agriculture through out the world, particularly in the developing and less developed countries.”

Roger J. Baccigaluppi, Chairman and CEO, RB International

“We recognize the proposal advanced by the Administration today in Zurich sends a credible signal to the rest of the world that the U.S. is prepared to make substantial cuts in trade-distorting domestic support if, and only if, market access barriers are greatly reduced and export subsidy practices are eliminated.”

Bob Metz, President, American Soybean Association

“Ambassador Portman took a necessary step in leading World Trade Organization members to the next, more intensive level of negotiations. The rice industry needs to remain vigilant and to hold U.S. negotiators to their commitment that any offers to cut U.S. farm programs are conditional on meaningful and enforceable market access openings and subsidy cuts in other countries.

Carl Brothers, Chairman, USA Rice Federation International Trade Policy Committee

“This bold U.S. offer presents a once-in-a-generation opportunity to re-assess the purpose of public financial support to agriculture and to re-align that support with things that strengthen the future for farming and respond to taxpayers’ expectation of farmers to produce clean water, wildlife habitat, healthy foods, food security and energy independence.”

Ralph Grossi, President, American Farmland Trust